

Richmond 18187 Staff Impression

Richmond stands tall at 6'2" with a lean frame. His rectangular-shaped head is framed by thick brown curls, playfully unruly on top but neatly shaved on both sides, like a perfect blend of carefree and clean-cut. His round brown eyes gleam with curiosity above a small button nose, adding a touch of cuteness to his look. His cleft chin and deep-set dimples make an appearance every time he grins—which, with his dazzling Colgate-worthy smile, is often. With a naturally elongated frame and a graceful posture, he carries himself with confidence, like someone who was simply made to stand out.

Richmond is the kind of guy who always has a compass in his pocket, a sketchbook in his bag, and a twinkle of adventure in his eye. As a geographer, he sees the world not just in miles and maps but in stories waiting to be explored. Whether he's scaling a rugged cliffside, trekking through the backcountry with nothing but his pack and a love for the unknown, or quietly observing a rare bird through his binoculars, he moves through life with a deep appreciation for the land beneath his boots. An artist at heart, Richmond has a knack for capturing the soul of a place in his sketches—his journals are filled with breathtaking landscapes drawn from his travels. He's the kind of person who can make a simple campfire feel like home, especially when he pulls out his harmonica and plays an impromptu tune under the stars. Down-to-earth, adventurous, and endlessly curious, Richmond is as genuine as they come. Whether he's charting new terrain, climbing sheer rock faces with fearless determination, or simply sharing stories over a campfire, he's the friend you want beside you on every journey—because with him, the map is just the beginning.
